(PDI) signed a strategic agreement estimated at over $5 million with Gilat Satellite Networks Ltd. (Nasdaq: GILT, TASE: GILT), a worldwide leader in satellite networking technology, solutions and services, for delivery of ubiquitous broadband coverage in Alaska. Gilat's SkyEdge II-c, multi-service platform, will support the goal of PDI's Aurora Network to deliver a wide range of applications to the population of Alaska. Aurora's first satellite, built by San Francisco satellite manufacturer and operator Astranis, will begin service in early 2022.
PDI intends to provide a true multiservice network that will serve the Alaska market with both fixed and mobility applications. The targeted fixed applications such as backup and full-time IP data services for businesses, organizations, schools, libraries, and government. The planned mobility applications include cruise ships, fishing boats and commercial aviation. The reliability, efficiency and features of Gilat's SkyEdge II-c ground segment provide exciting and new opportunities for Pacific Dataport to customize applications throughout PDI's Aurora Ka-band Network. Gilat's platform is designed to support a wide range of vertical segments with terminals optimized for the best efficiency and performance per required application, such as broadband, enterprise, cellular backhaul, and high-speed mobility. "After months of careful consideration and assessment of platforms on the market, Pacific Dataport selected Gilat due to its technological advancements, proven performance and global experience," said PDI's VP of engineering, Shawn Fitzpatrick. "We chose to work with Gilat's team of worldwide experts in leading-edge, high-performance satellite networking technology and equipment, and are confident that the SkyEdge II-c platform will meet our flexible application requirements." The ground segment from Gilat will work in conjunction with a space segment by Astranis, a manufacturer and operator of small satellites. The first satellite of the Aurora system is currently in final assembly at Astranis headquarters in San Francisco, CA, and will begin service in early 2022. About Pacific Dataport (PDI) Pacific Dataport Inc. (PDI) is a satellite middle mile provider headquartered in Anchorage, Alaska. PDI was founded "by Alaskans, for Al wireless), non-profits, hospitals, clinics, schools, libraries, governments (Tribal, local, state & federal) and Alaska Native Corporations, Villages and Tribes. PDI is currently developing the statewide Aurora Network, which consists of launching two new GEO HTS/VHTS satellites. The first, Aurora 4A, will be operational in Q2 2022 with ~7.5 Gbps. The second, Aurora IV, will be operational in Q3 2024 with 100+ Gbps. The Aurora Network will increase Alaska's middle mile broadband capacity by approximately 110 Gbps and serve ~98,000 broadband users with 25X3 service. This means more affordable, high-quality broadband for ALL Alaskans. Please visit: www.pacificdataport.com About Astranis Astranis is building small, low-cost telecommunications satellites to connect the four billion people who currently do not have access to the internet. Each spacecraft operates from geostationary orbit (GEO) with a next-generation design of only 400 kg, utilizing a proprietary software-defined radio payload. This unique digital payload technology allows frequency and coverage flexibility, as well as maximum use of valuable spectrum. By owning and operating its satellites for small and medium-sized countries, Fortune 500 companies, existing satellite operators, and other customers. The company is headquartered in San Francisco with a team of over $350M from top Silicon Valley and growth investors including Andreessen Horowitz, Venrock, and BlackRock.
